THE report of the trial of Guiteau, the wretched assassin of President Garfield, must tend to raise the procedure of the American Courts in the estimation of all thinking men. While the circumstances of the assassination naturally led people to a display of lynch-law, the greatest pains seem now to be taken to give the murderer the benefit of a most unusual freedom of action in his own defence. It may be thought by some that the trial has resolved itself into one continuous scene of recrimination, and that it has been altogether a parody upon to learn that the British ship Tubal Cain, the dignity of Justice. We hope that no difficulty will be found to exist either in the disposition of the country people to sell their cocouns to the Agents of the foreigners, or in the Sill dealers here, whose opposition to the working of the filatures which Mr Major erected for Mesers, Jardine, Matheson & Co. many years since caused them to be closed.

good many things have changed since then; and we should hope that the new spirit of enterprize which the Chinese have been developing in recent times may lead them to welcome in a generous spirit what is certain to prove advantageous to the trade of their country. The proprietors of the filatures are no doubt prepared for opposition from the Chinese middlemen, and the inevitable Guild may be expected to foster combinations against them; but we should hope that the authorities would, if necessary, prove themselves powerful enough to cope with and frustrate them. In Canton. where the first filature was started ten years ago, there are now ten, with a total of twenty-four hundred casence, which produce twelve hundred bales, or nearly a thousand piculs, annually.

The following general order has been issued by the Commanding Officer of the Shanghai Volunteer Corps :- "The Commanding Officer must express grave surprise at a letter that appeared in the Mercury of the 12th instant, and he deems it desirable to point out to the members of the S. V. C. that any communication to the newspaper by any one on the roll of the Corps, commenting upon the management of the Force, is a very serious breach of discipline. For anything of the nature of a complaint there are always the regular official channels through which it can be forwarded, and which are indeed the only means by which immediate investigation and redress can be obtained. The Commanding Officer will always be only too pleased and gratified to receive any suggestion, either personally or by letter, from any member of the S.R. V who has anything to recommend concerning the management of the combined services, likely to tend to the increased efficiency or popularity of the Force."

Another indication of progress in China and that in the most important of all kinds of progress which can affect her, namely that a steamer is to be run between Shanghai and Soochow for passenger traffic. This is the first attempt we believe to establish regular steam communication between this and the important commercial city of Socchow, the traffic hitherto being carried on in sailing vessels built on models which became fashionable here some centuries ago. The new steamer, - which is appropriately name Hén-tsoo, or a pioncer vessel, -made s trial trip yesterday, and was announced to leave this afternoon on her first voyage to Soochow. January 21st. A fair business has been done in Patna Dpium since last report, but the rate for the drug has weakened during the latter part of the fortnight. For Benares a very restricted demand has been experienced for local requirements; but the call for the drug from Coast ports has, so far, supported, the rate for it. The present quotations are given at $617 to $620 for Patna, and $6183 to $620 for Benares.

The receipts for the month, so far, stand at 4,320 chests against 3,390 chests to the corresponding date last year. During the interval some 600 chests have been taken by the local consumers, against 250 chests the corresponding interval last year, when a higher lekin duty it was reported would be imposed, on account of which business was quite restricted. The present available supply is computed at 1,500 chests, against 2,250 chests at the corresponding period last year. Of this last quantity 450 chests were Benar s of which the present stock comprises 500 chests.

A belated lodger lingered abroad after

The question of Chinese oaths once was an object of frequent discussion. For, the absence of judicial awearing from the courts in China had created for the colonies a source of difficulties which one tried to surmount without sufficient preliminary knowledge of the people's character and religious conceptions; and the result naturally was, that many a form of oath was precipitately adopted which afterwards proved to be worthless, and therefore had to be put aside again: A general mistake of most of the judiciary bodies was that in their profesoworthy zent for scouring a proper administration of justice by establishing a on Heaven and Earth, their Thien-Ti, 天 reliable system of swearing, they forgot to make a clear distinction between an "imprecation" and an "oath." Some tribunals f.i. let a witness break a saucer; and tell him : " May my soul fulthough a Chinaman naturally understood his body] be oracked likewise if I do not speak the truth.19 In other cases-and this became a more general method-they let him out off a cock's head and exclaim: "May I be done to as I do unto this fowl if I perjure myself," and so on :- but in the eyes of most Chinamen practices of this kind are perhaps as nonsensical as they are in ours, because they include nothing that may influence their religious feelings. They are mere " imprecations," but do not constitute what we understand by an "oath," Imprecatory formalities of that sort may be, perhaps, useful as appendices to a purely religious oath, especially when inferior people are sworn, who want to have their rough minds somewhat intimiduted by a practice likewise rough; but erroneous it is in any case to put the centre of gravity in them. The stress ought, on the contrary, to be laid upon the element, may never be celipsed by an imprecation that scarcely deserves a secondary gathered in his sheaves, acknowledges that Now the question naturally arises : how it is his duty to "thunk Heaven and worship Earth. 118 may the religious feeling of the people in the best way fall in with the acremony of judicial oath-taking, and how may it be made to add value to their onths as a bond upon the conscience? The solution is not at all difficult, and a moderate knowledge of Chinese religious conceptions may be herein a most trustworthy guide. We think that the way in which the question has been settled in Western Borneo, stands best the In this country no cocks are decapitated before the tribunals and 'no ouns smashed to pleces, but witnesses are, as soon as they have giver evidence, led under the open sky, to solemnly declare before Heaven and Earth that the plain truth, and nothing but the truth, has been told by them.

During the performance of this rite, the swearer holds one or three inceuse sticks in his hands, for no Chinaman would venture to appear before his gods, without this visible and odoriferous token of respect between his fingers. Two sticks may not be used. because this number is exclusively employed the neople of this country in worship of the dead. Some columnal officials of the swearer's own nationality accompany him. and one of them dictates what he is to say for a fixed formula is not prescribed, neither could; even if there were, a simple Chinaman be supposed to have learned it previously by heart. In this way the witness is made to state before Heaven and Earth that he has given evidence to truth; but of his own accord and without instigation he often adds an imprecatory invocation of these two supreme divinities, exclaiming that they may destroy him and his whole offspring if he makes himself guilty of perjury. A bow à la Chinoise concludes the ceremony.

At Pontianak, the central seat of the Government of Western Borneo where this note is written, such judicial oaths are generally taken in presence of the Dutch official interpreter. But so far as to what concerns the form; now we shall consider the religious value of this oath.

It is a well-stated fact; that the Chinese have no notions about the Supreme Being a numerous host of deities, upon whom the fate of everything terrestrial is thought to be dependent, and in whose faces onthe may accordingly be properly sworn. At the summit of this whole Parmassus are Heaven and Earth, the Father and the Mother of the

These two superior Gods are regarded by all classes of Chinese as the most influential and powerful of higher beings, and therefore held in an unrivalled veneration. And no wonder, For since very early times the inhabitants of Far Cathay must, like every other people, have been conscious of their absolute dependence upon these Suprema Powers, which are the authors of production and of everything that is, will be, and ever was created. Heaven is the Almighty God. who through the sun, his powerful agent, causes cold and heat, daylight and darkness, life and death alternately to reign. It gives birth to the annual periods of rain, drought. snow and wind; and thus rules the yearly and daily occupations of man. It excites and stops production, and consequently bears absolute sway over the fate of the human race: -in a word, Henven is the omnipresent Lord, who governs the world and everything animate and inanimate that is within its apheres. The Western peoples of antiquity. likewise aware of man's insignificance in the face of that awe-inspiring power, could not help humiliating themselves before the Hesvenly God, and so remarkably was his worship developed among the nations which dwelled around Old Judea, that it caused the Jewish legislator to exclaim: " And lest thou lift up thine eyes unto heaven; and when thou seest the sun, and the moon, and the stars, even all the host of heaven shouldest be driven to worship them and serve them." He had to exhort his people against the example of most of the Asiatio and European nations, and to warn them against the majestic and glorious scenes of Nature; for so seducing is the overawing spectacle of the Universe, and so difficult it is to make man understand the metaphysical doctrines and teachings about a supernatural Power, that even the Jews could but hardly be prevented from prostrating themselves before the altars of Nature, where they could worship what their own eyes daily

Indeed, the worship of Heaven and Earth was in olden times nearly universal. As the ancient Chinese did, and the modern still actually do, so the Hellenio tribes placed Uranos and Goes at the top of Parnassus. because of their naturally standing at the head of all production and life. The Phonicians worshipped and adored that Divine Couple for a similar reason, and assigned a place to it in their national history as the progenitors of their princes; the Romans placed it at the head of their host of gods and the Atlanticans, Cretians, Celts and Scandinavians altogether had their Divinities of Heaven and Earth: -therefore we cannot wonder that as so many people did the same, the Chinese likewise paid a high veneration to the firmament above and the terrestrial sphere below. Inhabited by the sun, that great agent of Nature from

To return now to our starting points it is at the feet of this omnipresent Bual Power, that the Chinese of Borneo, in the way we have described, make their judicial oaths. Some hundreds, perhaps, were idministered through my own mediation during, the course of my official enveer, but I never perceived coolness or indifference on the swearer's part. On the contrary most of them invoked Heaven and Earth with unfeigned devotion, fervour and ardour; and I am convinced that not more perjurers were among them than can be supposed there would have been among as many Christians. swearing their own religious oath. Let it be noted, that the Chinese population of this colony is a mixture of Hakkas, Hokios and Fuhkienese, and that the oath is equally fitted for them all, as they without exception regard Heaven and Earth as the two highest divinities. Most of them maintain, however.

that it is sufficient to invoke the Heaven

only, because, as they say, wherever there in a Heaven, there of course at the same time is an Earth witnessing the oath. Certainly it needs not be told, that only when the formulary is properly dictated and recited, estimacy can be expected of the oath. For the driterion is, as in our own Christian paths, in the tenor of the words, and by no means in some accessory practices, as those of lifting up the fingers or burning incense sticks. The difficulty, which would ensue from this when European judges do not understand the spoken language of the people. is in Western Borneo radically removed by the enlightened policy of the Dutch Government. which has not shrunk from allotting seats in the tribunals to Chinese officials and notables. Whatever may be alleged against the Chinese and their character, experience has proved here, that they actively, and with much sense of duty, interest themselves in

I have seen girls, not accustomed to handle a sword, carve and cut the sprawling cock in their bewilderment in a most shocking roanner. I have also seen others, after many vain attempts to decollate the bird, at last let it slip from their hands, while the pour fowl, crying and bleeding, fluttered over the premises of the court, to the great pleasure of both spectators and policemen. Would it not have been better for justice if they had not been aworn at all? Many superstitious Chinese believe indeed, that a bloody oath, even though there bring ill-luck and calamities. Such people will, of course, always try to withdraw from giving evidence in courts where they can be compelled to take the life of an animal; and Justice accordingly loses by the oath, instead of gaining. It may, moreover, not be forgotien, that in these colonies a lot of Chinese are, or profess to be, adherents of the Buddhistic tenets, and frequently yow before their Gods not to co-operate in any way in destroying animal life; Now, for such people it is likewise a matter of course to avoid the courts where bloody onths are used for swearing purposes; for they cortainly, in the first place, do not like to have calamities sent by the Gods, as a punishment for their faithlessness and insincerity. The fundamental law for our colonies has an article, which runs: "Every one may the latest London and Colonial Papers, and profess his religious opinions with unlimited from other sources. Consignees are invited liberty, saving the protection of society and to communicate with the Editor in the its members against the transgression of the event of any inaccuracy occurring in this general regulations under penalty " (art. list as compiled from the papers and other 119). We do not know what jurists think information at his command. The Editor And certainly it is not a wrong principle, on of it; but we are convinced that most readers will, at all times, be glad to receive any will agree; that it is rather open to doubt additions to the list from those who have whether tribunals are in strict harmony with later advices, private or otherwise, than his this law, when they compel a Chinaman to swear the bloody outh and thus to break his religious vow relating to the sparing of animal life. Were such a bloody oath a necessary ceremony, which cannot be done without, there could be said something, perhaps, in favour of its being forced upon > orists a much better form, which could and ought to be substituted for it, such an oathtaking will always be a violation of the law of religious liberty whonever Buddhists are concerned. Especially among the Chinese of Borneo there are numbers of Buddhistic zealots, who abstain from shedding blood and even from the use of animal food; and it is certainly a boon both for the good, ad-
